Nursing Director Earns the WCC®, Wound Care Certified, Credential

Cranston, RI – June 24, 2010 – The National Alliance of Wound Care® (NAWC®) is pleased to announce that Gail Dombeck, Director of Nursing for Cedar Crest Nursing & Rehabilitation Centre, has successfully passed the examination to become Wound Care Certified (WCC®).

The WCC credential is fully accredited by the National Commission for Certifying Agencies (NCCA). The NCCA helps to ensure the health, welfare, and safety of the public through the accreditation of a variety of certification programs/organizations that assess professional competency. The NCCA uses a peer review process to: establish accreditation standards, evaluate compliance with the standards and recognize organizations/programs which demonstrate compliance.

The WCC credential is a multidisciplinary wound care certification available to licensed wound care professionals from across the healthcare continuum. This certification is the professional recognition that Gail Dombeck, RN, BSN, WCC, possesses the qualifications to deliver the highest standard in wound care to her patients.

Dombeck received her nursing degree at Boston College. She has been employed at Cedar Crest Nursing & Rehabilitation Centre in Cranston, Rhode Island, for 15 years where she leads the nursing department and oversees the wound care team. Ms. Dombeck lives in Warwick, RI, with her husband and two children.

Cedar Crest Nursing & Rehabilitation Centre is a 156-bed, family-owned and operated facility, located in Western Cranston and is currently celebrating its 40th anniversary. Cedar Crest offers long-term care, including a designated neighborhood for those with memory-impairment or dementia. Cedar Crest also provides post-hospital skilled nursing and rehabilitation care for more than 1000 patients each year who are admitted and discharged back to the community.
